

ABSTRACT

Methods for quantitatively or qualitatively detecting an analyte in a sample and suitable reagents for this purpose, in particular to a carrier molecule to which one or more analyte-specific binding partner(s) is/are bonded and which possesses additional binding sites for a specific binding partner X or Y which is associated with a component of a signal-generating system, and to the use of such a conjugate, in particular in homogeneous binding tests.